What is Aphasia?

"Imagine if the last sentence you say tonight is the last full sentence you will say for the rest of your life."

Stephen Goff, person with aphasia

Aphasia is a communication problem, usually resulting from a stroke or injury affecting the language areas of the brain.

Aphasia is a problem with language, not a problem with thinking or intellect.

Aphasia can vary from mild to severe.

The Halton Aphasia Centre is a registered non-profit organization, funded partially through the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care.
